

Kathleen Inman is the owner, winemaker and General Manager of Inman Family Wines and Olivet Grange Vineyard in Sonoma County, California.

A Napa Valley native, Inman started Inman Family Wines in 2000 with the planting of her 10.45-acre estate in the heart of the Russian River Valley. She currently produces Pinot Noir, an intentional direct-press Rosé of Pinot Noir called Endless Crush®, Pinot Gris, Chardonnay, Extra Brut Luxe Cuvée, Brut Rosé, and a Blanc de Noir. Kathleen endeavors to produce wines that are naturally low in alcohol, high in acid, and food friendly. She was the first new California luxury brand to launch using all Stelvin® closures and was a pioneer in the rosé movement producing her best-selling Endless Crush ® rosés since 2004, long before they became a staple in California wineries.

Through her vineyard and winery, Inman has been able to meld her passion for Pinot Noir and what she calls her “ecoethics”-sensitive farming, natural winemaking and environmentally responsible business practices. Inman works fervently to grow grapes and to make wines as naturally as possible to ensure they embody not only the pure personality of the grapes from which they’re made, but also the singular character of the place where they’re born, while at the same time making the smallest impact possible on the land, water, and air. Inman farms organically and is proud that her property has been certified sustainable by Sonoma County since 2016.

Inman’s passion for the environment was further embodied through her design of the Inman Family Winery, which is made almost entirely from recycled materials and is 100% solar-powered. The winery was also the first privately owned, publicly available electric vehicle charging station in the North Bay; it is connected directly to the winery’s solar array, off the grid.

In 2011 Inman was awarded the Best Practices Award from the Business Environmental Alliance of Sonoma County Award, and in 2012, she was awarded the Rising Star Winemaker Award by Women for WineSense.

While Inman’s love of wine began in a wine class at UC Santa Barbara she started her career in England where she lived for 16 years after college. Starting her career as a chartered accountant at a large international firm, Kathleen obtained an MBA at University of Bradford. She was named an associate partner at the UK’s largest executive search firm prior to moving back to Northern California in 1998.

Inman lives in Healdsburg with her “trophy husband” Simon and cats, Hattie and Mabel. She has two daughters, Ashley and Meredith, and a granddaughter, Ada. Beyond the world of wine, Kathleen’s passions include cooking, listening to contemporary indie-rock music, and winning at Scrabble.
